

Can information be taught?

Educators are being advised by so many amateurs, that one more "couldn't" hold.

We know that the children of poor and illiterate homes tend to remain poor and illiterate.

Recent re-emphasis on reading, writing and arithmetic was intended in time to remedy that.

Now it is occurring to some of us that the "three R's" are not enough.

The generations which made our nation the powerhouse of the planet were also taught geography and history and other "cultural" information.

Prof. E.D. Hirsch Jr., of the University of Virginia, has written a book called "Cultural Literacy."

Cultural literacy is something more than literacy, Prof. Hirsch says. "Just reading makes no sense unless you can make sense of what you read."

He says our present-day teachers are not necessarily inept. But they have been compelled to teach a fragmented curriculum based on faulty edu-caution theories.

"More and more young people don't know things that we used to assume they know."

The most recent Gallup survey of high schoolers reflected how few can identify the great figures of history. "Stalin was a German leader," "Franklin D. Roosevelt was a figure in the Vietnam war."

Few knew where most other countries are located.

Hirsch believes that above and beyond reading and writing, any degree of success in the modern world requires "a lot of basic information."

The high school student who thinks that Leningrad is a city in Jamaica or that the Alamo is an epic poem by Homer may have been reading but he has not been making sense of what he has been reading.

Education Secretary William Bennett says the Hirsch book "can and should change what goes on in our nation's classrooms."

Albert Shanker, president of the American Federation of Teachers, says, "Prof. Hirsch explains why so many of our children who do well in early reading lessons are bored dropouts by the tenth grade. Reading, like thinking, cannot be separated from substance and content."

Prof. Hirsch believes that "to grasp the meaning of words on a page we already need to know a lot of information that is not set down on that page."

Prof. Hirsch believes we should "begin teaching this information" by kindergarten and first grade.

NO. THE BANK PUT UP THAT SIGN WHEN WE FILED CHAPTER ELEVEN,

Superconductivity 'new' breakthrough

Superconductivity is a remarkable phenomena, discovered in 1911. Certain materials would conduct electricity with essentially no losses.

Unfortunately, this took place only at extremely cold temperatures, near absolute zero — a minus 273 degrees Celsius. Electric currents would flow effortlessly through specific conductors.

There is no resistance to this flow and no losses in electrical power during transmission. Under normal electrical transmission today, there are significant losses in power as the electric current moves from place to place. Such losses are reflected in our electric bills.

Coal available in the Midwest is fairly high in sulfur. And the burning of this sulfur to generate electricity increases acid rain problems. To obtain coal in the Midwest that is low in sulfur, it must be shipped from the West, areas like South Dakota. That is a distance of about 1,000 miles.

But superconductivity might make it possible to transmit the electricity instead of the coal. It would be fantastically cheaper if superconductivity could be made

Think About It

By Prof. F. Henry Firsching

Now a truly phenomenal temperature rise has been claimed, to 98 degrees Kelvin. This is astonishing! A new material that superconducts an electric current at such a high temperature was not anticipated. Work at other laboratories has not yet confirmed this result, but if it is true, then the practical application of superconductivity is at hand.

The reason is that liquid nitrogen can be used to cool the system instead of helium. Liquid nitrogen boils at 77 degrees Kelvin. Liquid nitrogen is only one-tenth as expensive as helium and is 20 times more efficient than helium in cooling. That is an overall factor of 200 in cost.

Perhaps this latest laboratory discovery could lead to a commercial system that could carry electricity for long distances without any losses.

That could significantly reduce our electric bills. But first this latest finding must be confirmed and then developed into a commercially attractive transmission system. Once that is done, we can all reap the benefits of this new technology.

Editor's visit to Cahokia gave reasons to reflect

The three newspapers produced weekly in Granite City are a constant, enjoyable challenge for East Side Publications, and so are the other two newspapers in our group — the Cahokia-Dupo Journal and the East St. Louis News-Journal.

Sometimes, usually when a staff member is vacationing, I get to work as a reporter in one of those communities. Each time that occurs, it's a reminder of how dedicated members of our reportorial staff are to the communities they serve.

The last time I worked in East St. Louis was around October, when our community editor, Bonita Gover, went on a well-deserved vacation. I arrived a couple of weeks after the flood that had pushed raw sewage and river water into a large portion of the downtown area. The work of sorting through the accusations was difficult enough, but making matters more complicated was the hearing held at City Hall, Shang Greathouse, head of the Metro-East Sanitary District, was being berated by members of the public who wanted a scapegoat. He was "saved" during the process by Mayor Carl Officer, who made a surprise announcement that fear of disease meant people had to move out of the homes they'd cleaned and reoccupied. From the flood damage to the hearing itself, everything about the situation was a mess.

Sorting that story alone was a challenge, but the job also entails other duties expected of an editor — handle the telephone calls and at once be ready to act as a public relations agent for the newspaper, as the paper's complaint department, as a reporter ready to take a story, as the editor who has to explain why a story was or wasn't covered, and why it did or didn't appear on Page One; as a psychologist assigned to listen to persons who just don't know who else to turn to the hats an editor wears can fill a couple of closets. But, then, we all know that some journalists are headstrong enough, and have heads large enough, to wear all those hats without showing any signs of strain, thank you.

Last week I got to work in Cahokia for Bill Milligan. Many of our readers will remember Bill as the reporter who provided the excellent, insightful coverage of the controversy between the Granite City School Board and Superintendent Max Redmond. Now a member of our management staff as editor of the Cahokia-Dupo Journal, Milligan has made the newspaper a force in the community.

As those who know Bill should expect, he does not shirk his responsibilities. It would be so easy just to "get along" in a community by soft-pedaling the news, by not fully reporting the facts, by not seeking all sides, by not telling the public exactly what an event means in clear terms.

I've seen journalists like that, whole newspapers like that, and they make me angry. Such newspapers don't take editorial stands, they don't run controversial letters only because they might be controversial, in short, they don't care about the public. They seem to embrace a philosophy that is horrifying in a democracy, albeit a capitalist one — that the only purpose of a newspaper is to suck money from a community. They can say what they want, scream to high heaven about it, but if any newspaper doesn't seek to guide a community by providing editorial leadership, it isn't fit to wrap fish.

Bill is one of those people who realizes that newspapers in this country played a vital role in its formation. Newspapers such as those published by Joseph Franklin, Benjamin Franklin, Isaiah Thomas and John Peter Zenger — shook the foundations of British government by simply telling people the truth.

The truth is as important today, and though not always pleasing, the activities of those local government leaders who have in some cases managed to establish facsimile monarchies — providing patronage jobs in return for the "royal" tax, votes and other tribute — must be reported to the public.

In the Cahokia-Dupo area, there are a couple of persons who have established thrones for themselves. Bill has his eyes open. He reports what needs reporting. He criticizes when criticism is due. But, more importantly, the thing that makes Bill an asset to the community is a rounded perspective.

He could take his journalistic responsibility too far, as some papers are wont to do. He could spend his time calling people "liar" in editorials and always accentuate the negative rather than the positive things happening in the area. Though the Cahokia-Dupo area is no more a paradise than any other of the dozen Metro East communities in which I've reported, it certainly isn't any worse — it has quite a bit going for it, in fact.

Bill's been on top of the business developments. The community is moving to take advantage of Interstate 255. Some people have been wise enough to see the French heritage in Cahokia is a treasure well worth showing off to the nation. There's a sense of community pride, a sense of growth and ambition that's stirring within the public and Bill is helping to foster it.

Sure, he has to say so when something's wrong. If nobody talks about it, a problem won't ever be fixed. But he's in there plugging. He does his best, this man who wears many hats, to let the community know when a new business has started or to give his "Tip of the hat" to those who've done something worthy of praise.

Filling Bill's shoes this week was a tough job (his feet are bigger than mine), but it was fun, too. I enjoyed talking to people who've formed the Militia de Sainte-Famille. It's always a joy to come across people who are not only pleasant, but intelligent and community minded. I handled one complaint, from a man whose daughter's name was printed incorrectly, and his understanding of how the error occurred spoke highly for the best kind of people a community can hope to have.

Bill, like Bonita in East St. Louis, has a difficult, time-consuming task. One both handle nicely. And though I enjoyed my short return as the local editor for the Cahokia-Dupo Journal, it's good to be back in Granite City because having people like Bill and Bonita handling their end means I can "relax" and concentrate the majority of my worries on just the three papers a week we publish here.

Post Office wants you to get the message

By Patrick Martin
Editorial director,
Suburban Journals

The U.S. Postal Service is expanding its service from people getting it there to getting it there with a message.

It has issued a commemorative book of 10 stamps with messages that vary from Love You, Mother to Keep in Touch.

This is a radical departure for the post office. It usually specializes in commemorating people everyone else has forgotten.

How many times have you bought a stamp and then noticed it said something like "Gus Frump," with no explanation? Then you walked out feeling stupid because you didn't know who Gus was, or what he did. He must be somebody, you thought, or his mug wouldn't be on a stamp.

You shouldn't have felt dumb. Some of the honorees probably were relatives of the postmaster general. That made them somebody.

Anyway, the person off in a government office someplace who makes those decisions after he runs out of relatives now has a partner. The new guy decides what messages to put on the stamps.

His first effort included Get Well! Thank You! Love You, Dad! Best Wishes! and Happy Birthday!

We're not talking major imagination. This is America. We should do better and we can do better.

The next issue should contain more personal messages that could send to our favorite friends and personalities.

One might be a "Get Off The Phone!" stamp which we could send to those children, the assessor's office or Sorkis Webbe Jr.

Other appropriate stamps might be "Break A Leg!" — sent to anyone in the theater business or to the miserable slugs who catch for the New York Mets.

"Raise Issues, Not Your Pay" — to members of Congress, the state legislature or the St. Louis Board of Aldermen.

You get the idea. The original submission did not sit well with at least one official post office customer. In fact, the whole idea of messaging seemed odd and unnecessary to this man.

He observed me inquire about the message stamps and then shell out $2.20 for the booklet — we spare no expense for this column. He then gave the clerk a blank look.

Is this a post office or a Hallmark store? the man asked.

That fellow could use the Get Well! stamp in the original 10-pack. Maybe the next issue will have Cheer Up or Shut Up! in it.

The latter could picture Oscar the Grouch.

Come to think of it, if we're going to change formats and put messages on stamps, let's change something else and include faces we can recognize.

Oscar the Grouch I know. Gus Frump I don't.

Bowl-a-thon for DeCourcy

Granite Bowling Center is sponsoring its third Bowl-A-Thon on May 8 and 9 for 5-year-old leukemia victim Catherine "Catie" DeCourcy.

The event is being organized by Henry Ross, owner of Granite Bowling Center and a local businessman, Thomas "Bud" Cathey, manager of Granite Bowling Center, and concert citizens.

On Nov. 12, 1984, Catie was diagnosed with acute lymphoblastic leukemia. Survival of this form of cancer is 60 percent in children her age, according to Dr. Garret Brodeur, her doctor at Washington University's Children's Hospital.

She is in remission but has nine more months of treatment ahead of her. In addition to Catie's weekly treatment, daily administration of strong anti-cancer drugs is required.

She undergoes painful and frightening spinal taps every eight weeks to remove a drug that may attack cancer cells that may hide in the spinal fluid. Catie has undergone 20 spinal taps.

She understands she must receive treatment. She can describe the procedures used in her treatment as well as pronouncing the names of her medications, a family spokesman said.

Catie has an identical twin sister, Sara, who is well and is being monitored for leukemia since her risk is greatly increased by being an identical twin of a leukemia victim.

The family is faced with tremendous hospital and clinic bills.

since they had no insurance when she was diagnosed. Each weekly visit is $240, and some drugs are over $40 per injection. Friday night, May 8, will be team bowling (four members per team; team can be mixed) at $10 per person for three games, including refreshments. Open bowling will also be available. Both activities begin at 7 p.m. Open bowling will be held on Saturday, May 9, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Shoe rental is free for all the events. Local merchants have donated prizes to be awarded to participating bowlers throughout the competition. All proceeds will be donated to Catie's fund for her medical expenses.

Orsey addresses federal retirees

National Association of Retired Federal Employees Chapter 1067 heard a talk by Dennis Orsey, assistant Illinois attorney general, at a meeting at Charlie's Restaurant.

President Gene Ross presided. The invocation was given by Tharah Erney, and all repeated the Pledge of Allegiance.

Ross introduced Orsey, a native Granite citizen who is regional director of the Granite City office. There are many services for Illinois seniors: consumers, disabled persons, crime victims and farmers, Orsey said. Dozens of pamphlets are available at his office, 1314 Niedringhaus Ave.

Alex Ducini presented a legislative report. Support for a full COLA (cost of living allowance) in federal annuities in 1988 appears to be favorable in both the House and Senate budget committee, he said, as does opposition to an Administration proposal to alter employees' and retirees' health benefits.

A report by the General Accounting Office shows that federal retirees and employees have "carried a huge burden in the effort to reduce the budget deficit," Ducini said.

Any retired federal employee who would be interested in joining NARFE is being invited to do so. The group seeks to "save the federal employee retirement system, protect federal service annuities, and fight government intervention in individuals' economic future. To join NARFE, call 797-0527.

The next meeting is at Charlie's on May 11 at 11:30 a.m.

Stabbed at Gateway Plaza

Wayne Shelton, 20, of Wheeling, W. Va., was found in the parking lot of Gateway Midstate Truck Plaza with a stab wound to the abdomen at 11:20 p.m. April 25.

John Poston of St. Louis, a driver for Hogan Trucking in St. Louis, told Madison police he gave Shelton a ride to the truck plaza. Poston told the man he was leaving and that Shelton would have to stay there.

Later, another man told Poston there was a man hurt in the rear lot. Poston went there to investigate and found Shelton was bleeding. He moved the victim to the fuel desk of the truck plaza and called an ambulance. Shelton was rushed to St. Mary's Hospital in East St. Louis.

Another truck driver told police Shelton sold baking powder to a driver, and the buyer became angry when he discovered it was not cocaine. The suspect was about 40 years old; his clothing included a plaid shirt and he was driving a Shaver truck.

Shelton was diagnosed as having a serious wound, but rejected medical advice and checked out of the hospital.

City jail complies

GRANITE CITY — For the fifth consecutive year, the Granite City jail is in full compliance with state regulations, the Illinois Department of Corrections reported.

In a report filed with the city, an inspector commented favorably on the cleanliness of the jail. The report also noted that the jail was recently painted.

The jail was inspected March 26 and graded in the areas of physical structure, cell facilities, supervision, security, food, sanitation, fire protection, emergency procedures, detainee records, use of force and legal rights of the accused.

A copy of the report is available for public inspection in City Clerk Bob Stevens' office at City Hall, 2000 Edison Ave., during regular business hours.

Illinois Revised Statutes require that the Department of Corrections inspect the jail at least once annually and make the results available for public review.

The jail, located at the Granite City Police Department, 2330 Madison Ave., has a capacity of six men, two women and two juveniles, according to the report.

POLICE ARREST TEENAGER

You Can Bank on It!

BART SOLON
President

Q. There are a lot of places, other than banks, asking me to invest my money with them. Can you give me some idea of what benefit there is in a bank versus other "money institutions?"

A. There are a number of advantages your bank can offer over other non-bank "money institutions." First, there is the range of services all under one roof. Many other institutions specialize in only one or two services. Second, under that same roof, there are people who know you. Your neighbors and friends from your town. That means a lot. Speaking of your town — our town — that's where your money stays, helping the local economy. And, there is the fact that your accounts at your local bank are federally insured, up to $100,000, by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. That insurance is applicable only to banks, and it's a nice feeling to know that no matter what happens, your savings and investments are protected. Finally, we feel banking is a very personal thing, best done personally, face-to-face. We're here whenever you need us — and you don't need a 20% stamp.

Venice, Granite City firemen will help victims of crimes

Dick Allen, Madison County state's attorney, this week praised the 12 municipal and rural fire departments that have sent letters agreeing to participate in the Senior Victims Assistance Program.

He said, "We are able to secure some limited amounts of money from a grant program to provide emergency repairs for homes of senior citizens when they are the victims of crime."

"The purpose of the fund is to effect emergency repairs to doors, windows or locks that have been damaged in the aftermath of a residential burglary or home invasion. Of course, we are not able to do anything elaborate or cosmetic in nature, but we want to secure the home so that the people will feel safe and secure again," Allen said.

"Although we were able to secure some money for materials, the problem we faced was how to accomplish the labor involved in making the repairs.

"Fortunately for the senior citizens of Madison County and the success of this program, the firemen came forward and volunteered to handle this aspect of the program for us."

"In cooperation with Bill Seago, our Senior Victim officer, the participating fire departments will supply personnel to handle the emergency repairs."

"Firemen have displayed an outstanding spirit of civic duty and responsibility in lending their invaluable assistance."

The departments participating are Granite City, Venice, Roxana, State Park, Godfrey, Hamel, Cottage Hills, Maryville, Alhambra, Dorsey, Collinsville and St. Jacob.

VAN HITS CAR, PICKUP: 2

TAKEN TO MEDICAL CENTER
Timothy Cox, 21, of 2124 Dewey Ave., was charged with driving while under the influence of alcohol, two counts of leaving the scene of an accident and driving while his license was revoked after a van he was driving allegedly hit a parked car at W. 20th Street and Illinois Avenue and then crossed the center line on W. 20th, striking an oncoming Granite Sheet Metal Co. pickup truck driven by Darin L. Farney, 20, of 2273 Shirline Drive.

Both Farney and his passenger, Junior Aaron, 2024 14th St., were taken by ambulance to St. Elizabeth Medical Center. The parked car was owned by Phillip Szymanski, of the 2600 block of Grand Avenue. The mishap occurred at 1:41 p.m. April 28.

OWNER REPORTS AUTO THEFT

Gregory L. Darden, 22 Venice Homes, Venice, reported April 28 that his car, which had been parked three weeks ago at an automobile sales and repair shop at 15th and State streets, was missing. The owner of the shop said he had assumed the car's owner had picked it up.

Area ranked best by CEOs

This metropolitan area received a solid ranking in a list of the best areas for locating office and industrial facilities, according to The Cushman and Wakefield Business America Real Estate Monitor, a survey conducted by Louis Harris and Associates.

Among a list of 12 areas chosen to reflect a varied economic base, CEOs (chief executive officers) and real estate executives ranked St. Louis in the top five as most appealing to locate a business based on cost and availability of labor, proximity to raw materials, and the climate government creates for business.

"We're bullish on St. Louis," said Cushman's vice president of market research, David Giannella. "Although we are not currently in that market, we have closely monitored the area's rehabilitation and economic growth with interest. The CEOs' perceptions confirm our belief that St. Louis is an attractive office and industrial facility location."

This area's most appealing amenities for industrial locations — proximity to markets, proximity of raw materials, and cost and availability of labor — place it in the top half of the cities rated.

The strategic location clearly became a top priority in industrial decisions where product distribution is a factor, in terms of both cost and level of service, it was rated.

The Real Estate Monitor is a report on the commercial and industrial real estate market as seen by executives of leading U.S. corporations. The first in a series of four quarterly reports is a survey of 400 CEOs and 201 senior corporate real estate executives at companies with revenues of $100 million or more.

Despite St. Louis' location, the city did not receive a particularly high ranking for proximity to markets, customers or clients.

With offices in 60 markets, Cushman and Wakefield is the largest firm exclusively serving the needs of business in American real estate. It is involved in office, industrial and retail sales and leasing, financial services, development consulting, appraisal, market research and building management and operation.

didn't do anything," Vincent said.

It would be well worth it if we could do it," Wilson agreed. Another person in the audience asked if it is more difficult to get businesses or homeowners to clean up their property. Public pressure can have more effect on businesses, it was noted.

Madison County has tried for 10 years to get one specific area in the village cleaned up, Wilson said.

"I think we should get a committee from different areas to encourage people to clean up their property and make it more attractive," Merritt said.

Shoney's decision reversed

By Dave Gosnell Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — The controversial proposal to build a Shoney's Restaurant on Nameoki Road received a boost from the city's Plan Commission.

The commission reversed itself Thursday by approving a petition to rezone a section of Nameoki Road at Richmond Avenue allowing a Shoney's to be built. About 40 residents from the Richmond Avenue, Fair Oaks Drive and Garfield Avenue areas were on hand to express their displeasure with the decision.

On March 26, the commission voted 5-2 against rezoning the area for commercial use, but the Granite City Council later instructed the commission to reconsider its decision. Council members and city administrators said information the commission used to render its negative decision was incomplete.

Plans previously unknown to the commission for improving storm water drainage and sanitary sewer lines in the area was offered Thursday by acting city engineer Ed Schulze and Alan Ortbals, the city's economic development director.

Area residents oppose the Shoney's because they fear the restaurant would compound drainage problems, overload the sewer system and create traffic congestion.

"There are some questions that went unanswered, critical to the Shoney's decision," Ortbals told commission members.

He said the city has agreed to construct one of two projects to improve the area's drainage.

The option would be to construct a storm sewer line from the Braincliff retention pond to the North Granite retention pond, which would parallel nearby railroad tracks. The other would also follow the tracks but would be diverted in one location should six property owners continue their refusal to give the city a right-of-way for the line, Ortbals said. The second option would cost $20,000 more to build.

Illinois Central Gulf Railroad Co. agreed in February to allow the city to build and maintain an eight-inch line next to the company's tracks. Ortbals said further research indicated the city made an agreement in 1964 with C.D. Peters Construction Co. to build the line. He said he was not aware of the agreement when the Plan Commission met in March.

Schulze said he thought the commission was aware of the Illinois Central and C.D. Peters agreement.

"I thought you knew," Schulze said. Schulze did not mention the plans when questioned by commissioners in March about whether Shoney's would increase sewer problems. At that time, Schulze said standing water on Nameoki Road continued to be a problem.

When questioned by commissioners whether the new storm sewer would alleviate drainage problems, Ortbals said the water storage capacity of the Braincliff retention pond was at 100 percent. With the new line, the pond would be at 80 percent capacity. With a Shoney's and a new line, the capacity would be at 90 percent.

"There would be more than enough room" for more water in the pond, Ortbals said.

Joe Hill, a spokesman for Fair Oaks residents and the Granite City Restaurant Association, said local residents and restaurant owners did not trust Ortbals' assessment of the sewer situation and Ortbals' economic impact report on Shoney's, which indicates local restaurants would not be hurt by a new Shoney's.

"Hopefully it (the new line) might handle the storm water problem but I don't think it will," Hill said, as many residents nodded their heads in agreement.

"Some of them (restaurant owners) are barely surviving. They do not buy Ortbals' report," Hill said.

Hill said he thought Shoney's would cause "horrible" traffic problems in the area.

He said many residents believe Shoney's is the next step to commercial development on streets beyond Nameoki Road.

There are people who have put their homes up for sale on Fair Oaks because of this project," Hill said.

"We have beautified our homes... and a big corporation comes in and we mean nothing," said one Fair Oaks resident, visibly shaken by the commission's impending approval.

Commission Chairman Phillip Theis and member Don Tanase said development at the location would happen without a Shoney's. Tanase said other types of businesses could build there without the commission's approval. He said he preferred to see a Shoney's there.

Charles Palus and Joe Ribbing were the only members on the nine-member commission voting against the rezoning.

"The commission's decision is advisory. The City Council will ultimately decide whether to grant the request. The council is expected to take up the issue at its May 5 meeting."

Warriors

Hendrickson allowed eight hits, but seven of them were ground balls and all of them were singles. He struck out three and walked one. Lynn allowed five hits while fanning two and walking two.

NOTES: Injuries continue to nag at the Warriors. Rich Wilson, the team's leading hitter, lost a battle with the outfield fence during practice Thursday and broke his nose and injured his knee. The knee will keep him out of the lineup a week and maybe longer. Charlie Collins probably won't return this year after suffering a broken hand last week. After Saturday's double-header at home against Centralia, the Warriors resume conference play at East St. Louis Tuesday. They have New Athens Wednesday and travel to Collinsville for a big conference game Thursday.

Don Deterding

Deterding into Hall as Kahok

By Dave Whaley

Executive sports editor

It might seem almost unthinkable now, but Don Deterding and the Collinsville Kahoks used to be a very good mix.

Deterding, the long-time basketball coach at Granite City High School, has had some battles with that Gang of Purple in recent years. But that doesn't wipe out the fact he was a great player at Collinsville High School in the early 1950s.

How great? Well, last weekend Deterding was inducted into the Illinois Basketball Coaches Association Hall of Fame. Not for his accomplishments as a coach, which are many, but for his years as a hot-shooting forward for Vergil Fletcher and the Kahoks.

Deterding was one of 12 from around the state inducted in ceremonies last week in Normal.

"I had a great time," Deterding said. "It was very well-organized and we had a lot of fun."

Deterding was a starter for the Kahoks his junior and senior years (1951-52) and set a school scoring record his senior year, although it was broken the next season.

We went undefeated in the Southwestern Conference my senior year," Deterding said. "But Madison knocked us out in the regionals. I thought we were as good as anybody in the state at midseason, but we struggled down the stretch."

At that time, the SWC was made up of Collinsville, Granite City, Edwardsville, Alton, Wood River, East St. Louis and Belleville.

"I was only 6-1, but I was always proud of saying I never had any of my shots blocked," Deterding said. "It was just a real good team."

Other starters for the Kahoks in 1952 were guards Rich Maack and Kurt Kobisch, forward Jim Ossola and center Jack Hanvey. Ossola later played at St. Louis U.

The coach, of course, was Fletcher, one of the legends of high school sports.

"He was definitely a fundamentalist," Deterding said. "And he was the sort where you really wanted to do what he told you to do. And as a person, he was above reproach. I know a lot of people didn't like him for various reasons, but I have always respected him as a man."

Deterding can also say he is the only one of Fletcher's former players who ever beat him as a coach.

"He had several of them come back to coach against him," Deterding said. "But to be fair, I probably had many more opportunities than the others."

Deterding's days at Collinsville add a little spice to the rivalry between the Kahoks and Warriors, and although Granite City has dominated in head-to-head play in recent years, the Kahoks got the win they needed this year to edge the Warriors for the conference crown.

As fine a player as Deterding was, he could also make the Hall of Fame on his accomplishments on the bench. He'll get his 40th coaching victory next season.

Crime, abuse victims being aided in Illinois

Joan's husband had been beating her for several months. She went to the domestic violence shelter in her neighborhood for help. There she found a safe place to stay and counselors who were trained to help her think about her problem and decide what to do about it.

Joan eventually decided that she wanted to go to court and get an order of protection against her husband. The counselors at the shelter helped her fill out the papers and find an attorney, and they accompanied her to court.

Roger had been mugged. The police had a suspect in custody, and Roger was ready to testify. Before the trial began, the victim's advocate in the state's attorney's office took Roger to the courthouse and explained the layout of the courtroom and what to expect during the trial.

She also called Roger's employer to help him get time off from work for preliminary interviews and the trial, and she helped him apply for compensation for his injuries.

Joan and Roger are fictional examples of thousands of Illinois crime victims who are helped each year by a variety of assistance and compensation programs. National Victim Rights Week, April 26 through May 2 this year, calls attention to the fact that anyone can be victimized by crime.

"Programs for crime victims have received tremendous support in recent years, as criminal justice officials and the public have realized that the rights of crime victims deserve at least the same consideration as the rights of suspects," said J. David Coldren.

He is executive director of the Illinois Criminal Justice Information Authority, a state agency that administers federally supported victim assistance programs in Illinois.

"Special efforts have been made to help crime victims cope with the emotional trauma of their experiences and understand the complexities of the criminal justice system. And our efforts have paid off."

"Not only are more crime victims getting the help and support they need, but more victims are coming forward to testify against people with a history of committing serious crimes."

Using funds from the federal Victims of Crime Act, the Authority has helped develop and support a number of service programs for crime victims in Illinois. These include:

"Direct services to victims. Victim advocate programs have been set up or expanded in 11 state's attorney's offices in Illinois to serve victims between officials and victims."

Sixty-four private, non-profit victim-service agencies that help victims of sexual assault, domestic violence and child abuse have received additional resources.

These programs offer referrals to agencies that can provide counseling and other aid, support at court and police interviews, assistance in obtaining support from employers, and other services. In addition, the service agencies provide crisis intervention, emergency shelter, counseling, and other help.

Training for victim advocates. Staff in both the state's attorney's offices and in private agencies have received training in how to help victims.

"Public education. Materials that explain the rights of crime victims have been distributed throughout Illinois. These include brochures on the Illinois Bill of Rights for Victims and Witnesses of Crime, handbooks for sexual assault and domestic violence victims, and other publications."

"Most recently, services to victims of domestic violence, sexual assault, and child abuse have been emphasized because there was an urgent need," said Coldren.

With one in four American households touched by a crime of violence or theft in 1985, it is clear that our victims need our attention too. It's time to look at the needs of other classes of victims and try to fill any gaps in services."

Some victims may need special services because of the type of crime they experienced, said Coldren. Survivors of violent crimes and the families of homicide victims, for example, often need services to help them cope with the emotional trauma caused by these crimes.

And the special circumstances of people who are victimized because of their race, religion or lifestyle must also be considered, Coldren said.

Victims who are elderly, handicapped or live in rural areas also have needs that the criminal justice system must meet, according to Coldren.

"All crime victims deserve fair treatment," said Coldren. "Whether their differences they all have two things in common: they have all been hurt, and they all deserve the support of the justice system."

Angie adding less Pepper to new role

By Nancy Mills
Old TV shows never die. They simply reappear as TV movies.

Kojak unwrapped his jollipop again two years ago and has since solved two more TV crimes. Perry Mason gave up his judge's robes to resume defending clients. His fifth case comes up later this month. The Six Million Dollar Man and the Bionic Woman will again compare artificial limbs in their first reunion in a few weeks.

Old TV movie stars never die. They reappear as presidents or as new movie stars. Angie Dickinson, who co-starred with Ronald Reagan in the first made-for-TV movie, The Killers (1964), is back in the genre again, playing a cop again.

In Police Story: The Freeway Killings, airing May 4 on KSDK Channel 5, Dickinson becomes a policewoman again after a nine-year leave-of-absence. This time, though, she plays Anne Cavanaugh, a cop who cares more about her man than her job. "Police Woman" Pepper Anderson, who spent four years in charge of her own show, is nowhere in evidence.

Dickinson, 36, is philosophical about her move back to supporting player status. "We all revolve around Richard Crenna's character," she said. "I'm a smaller character, but the characters aren't small. With three hours to fill, there's more time for each of us."

Police Story: The Freeway Killings views the personal and professional lives of a group of Los Angeles police detectives pursuing a serial killer. "I play Ben Gazzara's lover," Dickinson said. "This character, Anne, is more involved in her personal life. Pepper would gladly have stayed all night in the squad room. Anne can't wait to get home and see her guy. She's much more subservient, not that much of a takeover person—at least in this story."

Since Police Woman ended in 1976, Dickinson has had difficulty finding parts she felt were suitably challenging. "There aren't that many older leading men who are starring in movies, so there are a lot fewer scripts coming my way," she said. "There are no more John Waynes. It makes it tougher on us."

Dickinson is not the first actress to have this problem. "When Marilyn Monroe died at 36, people said she died because she couldn't face going past her prime," Dickinson said. "Now, partly because of the women's movement, older actresses are working more."

She credits feminism with helping Police Woman succeed. "They didn't think I'd make it," Dickinson said defiantly about being the first woman to carry a prime-time drama. "But that was when the women's movement was in full swing. I got in on the ground floor. It was very satisfying."

If Police Story develops into another series, Dickinson wouldn't be averse to appearing in it. "I'd love it if they'd bring us back four or six times a year, like they're doing with Perry Mason," she said. "But as a series, I don't think it would work. You can see the old series in syndication every day."

Unlike many of today's female stars, Dickinson has no qualms about promoting herself as a sex symbol. "If someone asked me, do I think of myself as one of the sexy ladies in town, I'd say yes," she said. "In my career I've tried to vary my choices so that I wouldn't just be a sex symbol, which was my main typecasting. I'd like people to say, Hey, that sexy Angie. She's a good actress."
